This special edition features articles on Panama reprinted from The Panama Canal Review, which began publication May 5, 1950. These articles, for which there have been many requests for reprints, have been selected from issues published between 1965 and 1973. Orders for this special edition should be sent to The Panama Canal Review, Box M, Balboa Heights. Each copy comes in a special envelope with a gift card, which will be inscribed as you request. Single copies, regular mail are $1 each, airmail $2. Check or money order should be payable to the Panama Canal Company.
THE HOLY GHOST ORCHID, the national flower of Panama, appears to have a perfectly formed white dove nestled in each waxy-white cup-shaped blossom. This fragrant orchid blooms from July to September and can be found at low to medium elevations in shaded areas, but commercial collecting has made it increasingly rare in Panama.
